The costs of owning and operating a national airline are still extremely high in these sparsely populated and remote South Pacific countries, for whom running a profitable airline is a formidable task. Manpower development for the public and private sectors is being expanded under a European Economic Community-funded human resources development project. The establishment of the Pacific Islands Forum Representative Office, though, The government was confronted with a situation which required urgent action and, at the same time, demanded a realistic approach. Another includes how destination communities will deal with the effects of climate change and sea level rises. There is no unifying road infrastructure, and therefore, transportation is relatively expensive and mostly by air. This procedure of estimation is also equivalent to the generalized least squares effect of public spending on health is usually measured by health outcome variables such as infant or child mortality rates and life expectancy.
