Iquestionsthepoweroffinance, technologyandmediocrityonourlives. The interest in low-budget American cinema led them to pursue with zeal the politique des auteurs - a pantheonisation of figures such as Howard Hawks and Samuel Fuller, whose individuality in making 'their' films in the teeth of studio-imposed constraints was lauded in a sometimes extravagant manner. The purpose of this organisation was to lift film out of its popular origins in fairground entertainment, and to give it cultural for which read middle-class respectability.
