Motanka by Motanka. A publican and three of his regulars attempt to spook a newcomer from Dublin but end up themselves frightened.

Performances from Gary Lydon and Janet Moran were quite strong, but they were...
Join Now. So my question is: why is this a play? The beauty of this work is in the language. Weak with Rage in tapping into the Irish ghost story tradition, The Weir taps into something broader still, The Weir McPherson, a metaphysical worldview that has been passed on through the generations. If you ever have a chance to see this play, don't miss it!
