Another record he had was the Elektra folk songs Sampler with a variety of artists. There was barely room enough for one person and the heat went off after dark and the place had to be heated by keeping both gas burners up full blast. Lewis had written Elmer Gantry and was the master of absolute realism, had invented it.

I had heard him play a few folk songs, but he never said much and I never spoke to. Later, I found myself taking the song apart, trying to find out what made it tick, why it was so effective. Words, music, the disarming drama of stripped-back storytelling. I feel the scheme has set me up for a writing life. I am truly indebted to her for she was like none of the other singers I ever heard, and neither were his songs.
